The world we image

An inclusive society that supports the well-being of everyone, on a planet where human lives in harmony with nature.

Hands on, Hearts open

We work to improve the quality of life and social inclusion of vulnerable and marginalized populations and to reduce their practices that may be harmful to the environment.

Where we're headed

SCDI's work will contribute to increase social inclusion and overall well-being of the marginalized and vulnerable populations and to protect the environment in Vietnam and beyond.

14 years of perseverance

Since 2010, SCDI has been working tirelessly with the most vulnerable and marginalized communities toward a society where no one is left behind.

The heartbeat of our work

equity

Meet people where they are and work with them so that they get to the place they want to be.

dignity

Respect and protect dignity and rights of each and every individual with whom and to whom we work.

integrity

Having organizational credibility and trustworthiness. Having a strong sense of principle and commitment to its causes.

Respecting the autonomy and right to self-determination of each CBO or NGOs with regards their own priorities and methods of organization.

generosity

Sharing information and resources, and providing technical assistance wholeheartedly and to the best of the as part of its abilities, all as part and parcel of its mandate to support community systems strengthening.

Areas of Work, Programs & Key Populations

Marginalized Populations

Populations that are social stigma, less likely to benefit from health, social, educational and legal public policies and programs

Vulnerable Populations

Populations that are disproportionately affected by diseases, poverty, injustice and lack of development opportunities

Among many populations that are at disadvantage for development, the following populations are identified by SCDI as both vulnerable and marginalized.

Our Programs

CHILDREN & YOUTH

The Children and Youth Program aims to develop and implement interventions to enhance health care and education access and strengthen the resilience of vulnerable children and youth. The program focused on developing intervention packages for children and youth, including education and health support, mental health and adverse childhood experiences reduction for vulnerable children, drug use prevention for young people.

HEALTH & SOCIAL PROTECTION

The Health and Social protection program strives to improve the well-being of target populations by addressing their diverse health needs, especially in epidemic and new-emerging diseases. The program aims to tackle these challenges head-on through proactive community screenings, treatment support, and improved access to public healthcare. The program also advocates for inclusive health policies and promotes social security benefits – all to create a strong foundation for a healthy community.

Strategic Approaches

Enabling environment

Social mobilization

Community-based interventions

Focusing interventions on our selected provinces to create impacts

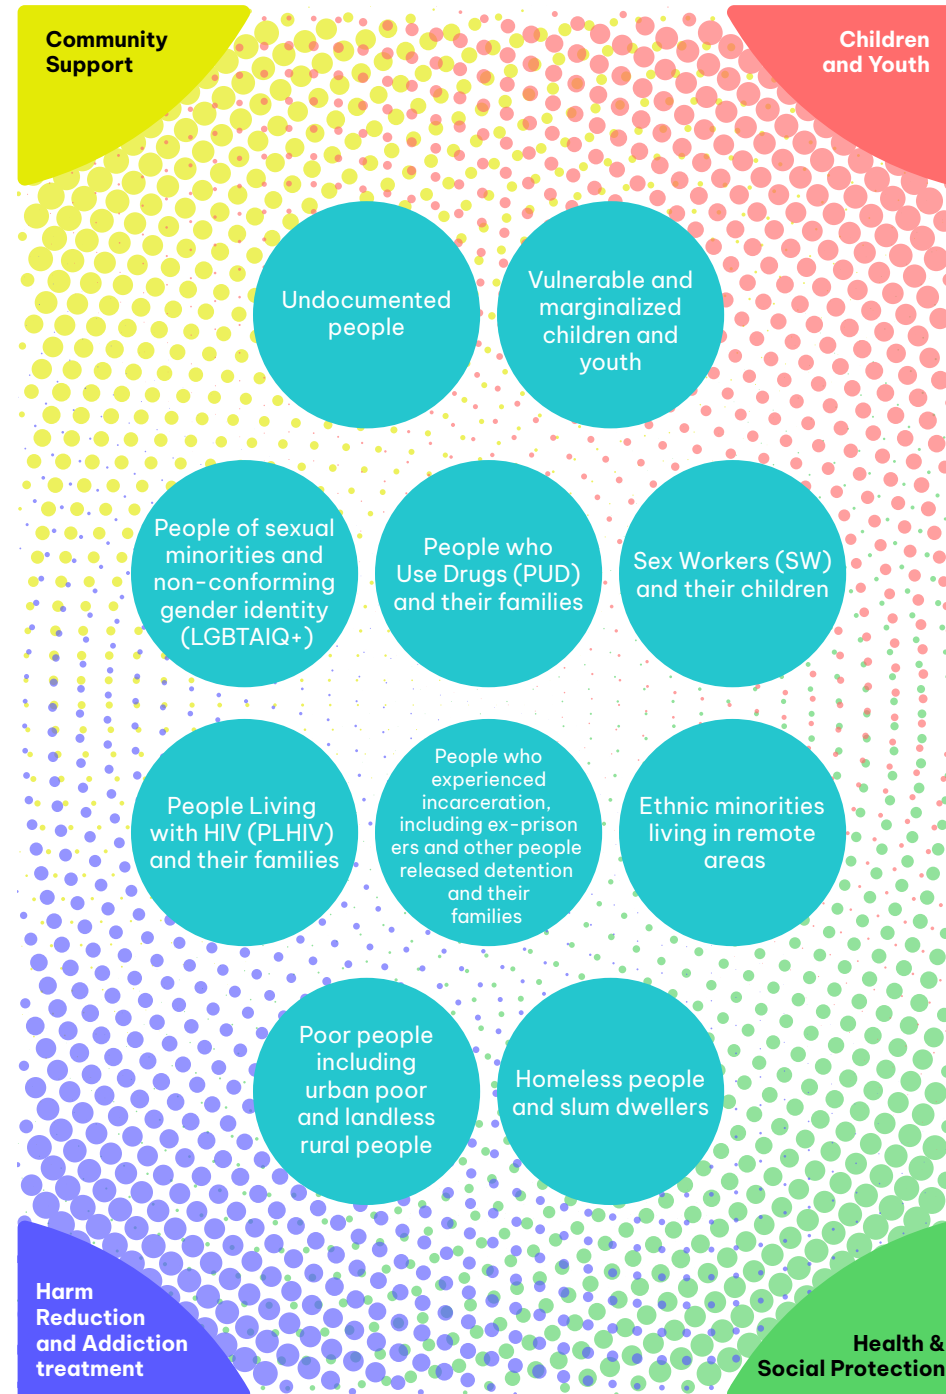

Growing our team and networks

HARM REDUCTION & ADDICTION TREATMENT

The Harm Reduction and Addiction Treatment Program aims to improve quality of life of people who use drug. The program applies a comprehensive strategy, including strengthening capacity of SCDI's team, community outreach workers and partners, developing pilot community-based addiction treatment and harm reduction models in Vietnam and enhancing partnerships to promote evidence-based interventions that reduce stigma and discrimination and increase access to health services and addiction treatment for the community of people who use drugs.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

The Community Support Program aims to support community-based groups, organisations, and networks of target communities in building and strengthening links within and between networks and enhancing member capacity to promote their meaningful participation in programmes, projects, and policies.

Community Support

Children and Youth

Undocumented people

Vulnerable and marginalized children and youth

People of sexual minorities and non-conforming gender identity (LGBTAIQ+)

People who Use Drugs (PUD) and their families

Sustainable Development Goal as the new global agenda

The year 2015 marked the transition from Millennium Development Goals to Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) with a much broader development agenda. All development aspects that affect the populations SCDI working with are addressed in the SDG agenda, including prevention and treatment of substance abuse, universal health coverage, elimination of HIV, TB and malaria, combating substance abuse as well as access to justice and poverty eradication.

This sets a very clear framework for SCDI to advance its mission.

CMAT (Community Against Malaria Action Team) has been working tirelessly since 2017 towards the goal of ending malaria in key provinces in the Central Highlands. CMAT has become one of the key community systems not only in malaria elimination but also in TB outreach and prevention in this region.

Country context

As the country grows economically, inequality grows bigger. The government has made a lot of efforts to address this concern. However, almost all government's program to address health, social, legal and other needs of disadvantaged populations are implemented by the government agencies, using the administrative system, which eventually exclude people who are not legally registered with the administration – the case of many people of marginalized populations.

At the same time, environmental disasters have been increasingly threatening safety and livelihood of the population, especially the vulnerable people. In addition to that, Vietnam is among the countries most affected by climate change, as being seen in floods in Ho Chi Minh city and salination of river and soil in Mekong Delta. The poor and vulnerable people whose adaptability is limited, more often than not, are pushed further to poverty and vulnerability.

Covid pandemic makes the situation worse for the marginalized and vulnerable populations, limited opportunities taken away, families further impoverished. Cycles of poverty are deepened. At societal level, inequality and inequity are widen. The government tries to address this by Covid-relief cash transfer and other relief programs. This helps to mitigate some impacts of the pandemic. However, given the magnitude of the crisis, it is not possible for the government efforts to help stabilize all these families.

In this context, civil society has an important role to play in advocating for the well-being of these populations as well as to deliver support for recovery from the pandemic. The positive developments have been seen. A significant number of organizations and networks of key populations for HIV and community organizations support them has been established and linked up, creating a strong foundation for advocacy and intervention programs. As a part of the process, constructive and effective engagement of civil society, including local NPOs and the key populations for HIV (sex workers, people who use drugs...) in the past years, has built confidence of both civil society and the government on the possibility of fruitful partnership.

The financial challenge requires government's attention to efficiency, leads to the government's reform of public services: moving from government-run programs to contract-based services, which can be an opportunity for civil society to participate.

These opportunities for civil society have not yet materialized though, and the next ten year will be the defining period for the engagement of civil society- including NPOs like SCDI - in the development of Vietnam.

SCDI – looking back and looking forward

SCDI, being anchored to the mission of improving life of marginalized populations have gained trust and confidence of populations we work with. We have built partnership with many marginalized and vulnerable populations – People living with HIV (PLHIV), People who use drugs (PUD), Sex workers (SW), LGBTIQ+, homeless people, urban poor, ethnic minority people. We have been instrumental in the formation of different community networks – VNPUD, VNSW, VNMSMTG, VCTB, VCSPA. This reputation and experience will be very helpful for SCDI in building partnership with other marginalized populations.

Working with and for marginalized populations, understand that policy change is important, but translating policy to program is also equally important, we pioneer in developing technical know-how in some programmatic areas that are challenging and/or neglected, such as interventions to protect sex workers, treatment of substance abuse, interventions to build resilience for marginalized children. Speaking of SCDI is speaking of constructive engagement with various stakeholders, including the community, government and donors. It is also because SCDI values long-term partnership, focus on long-term goals, escape “project” mentality.

The first strategic plan of SCDI 2011-2015 “Awakening Potentials” – focusing on empowerment of the most marginalized populations, particularly those affected by HIV, creating a community system that can identify and voice the needs of their own populations, address some of those needs. We can declare “mission accomplished” as networks have been formed, system has been in place, their populations have been recognized, and other organizations and programs are working to widen and strengthen the networks.

For the period 2016-2020, inspired by Sustainable Development Goals which agreed by Vietnam and other UN member states, SCDI focused on fostering development opportunities of the most vulnerable and marginalized populations. In those 5 years, with people-centered approach, SCDI went further in engagement with the target populations, to start address some fundamental development challenges facing these populations, following SDG targets such as SDG3 on substance abuse, HIV, TB, Malaria, universal health coverage...

In 2020, as Covid-19 pandemic broke out, SCDI initiated and delivered Covid relief activities that reached clients of our programs and the people vulnerable to the crisis and Covid brought about. This effort eventually extended our reach and broadened our scope of intervention, to the populations that SCDI did not target before such as the homeless, slum dwellers and the landless rural population. We also realized that these populations are prone to practices harmful to the environment (abuse of plastic, misuse of pesticides or herbicides...) while they easily fell victims of environment disaster or climate change due to lack of resilience. The engagement with these populations through Covid response helped SCDI identify critical development gaps among these and other vulnerable populations.

Moving forward, SCDI is determined to expand our scope of work to address some of these gaps such as poverty, education, justice, gender inequity and environment using population-centered approach.
